

U.S. PROPERTY PERFORMANCE MONITOR

Fourth Quarter

IN A NUTSHELL

- Core real estate, as measured by the NCREIF Property Index (NPI), registered unlevered total returns of 1.6% in 2020. These results begin to reflect the dislocation caused by COVID-19.
- Performance remained uneven across property sectors. Industrial continued to prevail, delivering double-digit total returns over the past year. Apartment and Office returns somewhat diminished as COVID-19 weakened property fundamentals. Retail realized the greatest disruption as the pandemic amplified existing challenges.
- Sun Belt markets generally led the index while Houston, New York and markets in the Midwest lagged behind.

Private real estate property returns

- Real estate returns were modest in 2020 as COVID-19 chipped away at both property values and income returns.
- The industrial sector's total return remained robust. All other property sectors realized negative capital appreciation.
- In 2020, real estate underperformed both bonds and equities as unprecedented stimulus buoyed financial markets.
- Overall vacancies increased in 2020. Apartment and Retail vacancies rose above 30-year averages while Industrial's vacancy rate remained near all-time lows.
- Trailing four quarter NOI declined 8%, the largest on record. Industrial (+6%) continued to build on strong momentum while Retail (-21%) and Apartment (-17%) realized significant NOI deterioration.
- Geographic trends were largely unchanged. Markets generally benefitting from lower costs and in-migration (i.e., Sun Belt) performed well. Expensive gateway markets (e.g., New York) generally underperformed.

NCREIF Property Index (NPI) performance by sector and region

- _ Industrial led the index over the past year, followed by Apartment and Office. Retail continued to trail far behind, posting negative total returns.
- _ Secular trends (i.e., e-commerce) continued to propel Industrial. All three subsectors continued to deliver robust returns, bolstered by both strong income yields and capital appreciation.
- _ Bankruptcies, store closures and a barrage of rent relief requests plagued Retail in 2020. Within Retail, Regional and Super Regional malls, which typically have substantial exposure to vulnerable tenants (e.g., apparel and department stores), realized the lowest total return (-10.6%). Retail centers which typically have necessity-based tenants (e.g., grocery) held up on a relative basis. Neighborhood and Community centers returned -2.0% over the trailing four quarters.
- _ Stable cash flows supported Office returns. Office NOI grew 1% (trailing four quarters) while occupancy rates and rents declined from cycle highs. Overall, Suburban Office (3.1%) outperformed CBD Office (0.5%) in the past year.
- _ Apartment returns were bifurcated. High-Rise apartments, already buffeted by supply, were challenged by pandemic related urban-woes. Garden apartments, generally located in the suburbs, remained a standout subtype, returning 5.2%.
- _ Regional dynamics were generally unchanged. The West led the pack, followed by the East and the South. Returns in the Midwest were negative over the past year.

Market analysis – benchmark insights and portfolio implications

The NCREIF Property Index is a value-weighted index of property returns and as such, a large portion of the index is located in just 20 markets. Local economic growth will affect properties located in the same market similarly, so we can estimate the effect of property geographical location on the overall index. Large metros, by value, will likely have the largest impact on the index, although small metro with particularly strong or weak performance may boost or weigh on returns from time to time. The following tables lists out which markets had the strongest positive and negative effect on returns during the past four quarters.

Apartments – The pandemic reinforced demographic trends underpinning apartment markets. Generally, low-cost regional markets (i.e., Sun Belt) continued to fare well while high-cost coastal markets (e.g., New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles) struggled. In 2020, Denver and Phoenix were the largest positive contributors. Smaller markets that fell outside of the top 20 — Charlotte, Orlando, Raleigh, Riverside and Salt Lake City — boasted some of the highest total returns.

Industrial – Performance was strong, with every market outperforming the NPI aggregate. High-barrier coastal metros in Southern California and New York dominated. Smaller, regional and local distribution metros such as Austin, Philadelphia and Reno were standouts. The major inland distribution hubs of Atlanta, Chicago and Dallas, all of which have above-average construction activity, underperformed. Houston produced the lowest total return over the past year.

Office – Innovation markets such as Boston, Seattle and San Jose continued to make the largest contributions to sector returns. Smaller office markets benefitting from demographic tailwinds (e.g., Raleigh, Charlotte, Nashville) generally performed well. Conversely, Midwest markets (e.g., Chicago) and energy dependent markets (e.g., Houston) underperformed. New York, the largest office market, continued to weigh on sector returns.

Retail – COVID-19 intensified Retail's woes, with every metro delivering negative total returns over the past twelve months. Mall properties, in particular, leveled a heavy blow to Retail returns. Metros with the largest negative contribution to sector returns (e.g., Boston, Chicago, Miami and New York) have notable mall exposure. Generally, tenant mix governed retail property performance as e-commerce continued to disrupt brick-and-mortar retailers.

The brand DWS represents DWS Group GmbH & Co. KGaA and any of its subsidiaries such as DWS Distributors, Inc., which offers investment products, or DWS Investment Management Americas, Inc. and RREEF America L.L.C., which offer advisory services.

This material was prepared without regard to the specific objectives, financial situation or needs of any particular person who may receive it. It is intended for informational purposes only. It does not constitute investment advice, a recommendation, an offer, solicitation, the basis for any contract to purchase or sell any security or other instrument, or for DWS or its affiliates to enter into or arrange any type of transaction as a consequence of any information contained herein. Neither DWS nor any of its affiliates gives any warranty as to the accuracy, reliability or completeness of information which is contained in this document. Except insofar as liability under any statute cannot be excluded, no member of the DWS, the Issuer or any office, employee or associate of them accepts any liability (whether arising in contract, in tort or negligence or otherwise) for any error or omission in this document or for any resulting loss or damage whether direct, indirect, consequential or otherwise suffered by the recipient of this document or any other person.

The views expressed in this document constitute DWS Group's judgment at the time of issue and are subject to change. This document is only for professional investors. This document was prepared without regard to the specific objectives, financial situation or needs of any particular person who may receive it. No further distribution is allowed without prior written consent of the Issuer.

Investments are subject to risk, including market fluctuations, regulatory change, possible delays in repayment and loss of income and principal invested. The value of investments can fall as well as rise and you might not get back the amount originally invested at any point in time.

Investment in real estate may be or become nonperforming after acquisition for a wide variety of reasons. Non-performing real estate investment may require substantial workout negotiations and/ or restructuring. Environmental liabilities may pose a risk such that the owner or operator of real property may become liable for the costs of removal or remediation of certain hazardous substances released on, about, under, or in its property. Additionally, to the extent real estate investments are made in foreign countries, such countries may prove to be politically or economically unstable. Finally, exposure to fluctuations in currency exchange rates may affect the value of a real estate investment.

Investments in Real Estate are subject to various risks, including but not limited to the following:

- Adverse changes in economic conditions including changes in the financial conditions of tenants, buyer and sellers, changes in the availability of debt financing, changes in interest rates, real estate tax rates and other operating expenses;
- Adverse changes in law and regulation including environmental laws and regulations, zoning laws and other governmental rules and fiscal policies;
- Environmental claims arising in respect of real estate acquired with undisclosed or unknown environmental problems or as to which inadequate reserves have been established;
- Changes in the relative popularity of property types and locations;
- Risks and operating problems arising out of the presence of certain construction materials; and
- Currency / exchange rate risks where the investments are denominated in a currency other than the investor's home currency.

An investment in real estate involves a high degree of risk, including possible loss of principal amount invested, and is suitable only for sophisticated investors who can bear such losses. The value of shares/ units and their derived income may fall or rise.

War, terrorism, economic uncertainty, trade disputes, public health crises (including the recent pandemic spread of the novel coronavirus) and related geopolitical events could lead to increased market volatility, disruption to U.S. and world economies and markets and may have significant adverse effects on the global real estate markets.
